

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Contact: Kristen Pettersen
203.591.5046
kpettersen@post.edu

Post University Selected as Top Military-Friendly School by Military Advanced Education for Second Consecutive Year

WATERBURY, Conn. (Feb. 1, 2011) – For the 2nd consecutive year, Post University was recognized by Military Advanced Education (MAE) magazine as a Top Military-Friendly University. This distinction ranks Post in the top 10 percent of military-friendly schools based on the quality of its academics and the support it provides to the military, veterans and their dependents.

"On behalf of Post University, we are honored to be able to accommodate those who are serving or have served our country, and we are very proud to be named a Top Military-Friendly School by Military Advanced Education for the 2nd consecutive year," said retired Lt. Col. Ed Lizotte, Post University Director of Military Programs and Veterans Affairs. "We continue to take the time to learn what active duty, veteran and military dependents need to succeed, and then make sure we provide it."

MAE is produced for servicemembers seeking to take advantage of military education benefits. Its annual guide honors higher learning institutions that place a high value on service and support of military personnel. Criteria analyzed in the guide include distance learning, quality academics, financial aid, transfer credits, and other opportunities for servicemembers.

Post University has been a pioneer in serving military personnel since 1976 and currently has a military enrollment of more than a thousand students. In addition to being a Servicemembers Opportunity College and a proud participant in the Yellow Ribbon Program, Post University has reduced its tuition and covered the cost of textbooks so military personnel and their dependents can earn an undergraduate or graduate degree at little or no cost to them.

As a traditional, fully-accredited university with an excellent online program, Post University also is uniquely positioned to meet the needs of active duty, veteran, and military dependents in flexible ways. Students may enroll at its main campus in Waterbury, Conn., take accelerated degree program courses at one of four locations in the state, or complete their degrees completely online.

"The success of our program is also a tribute to our students, many of whom are taking courses while serving overseas and balancing the demands of their military careers and family responsibilities," said Lizotte. "This accolade is a tribute to the hard work of everyone who takes part in this program and I salute each and every one of them."

Post University also was included in G.I. Jobs magazine's 2011 Military-Friendly Schools List.

To learn more about Post University's Military programs, visit www.post.edu/military, or to access MAE's 4th Annual Guide, go to www.military-advanced-education.com.