Mr. Mulgrew is an engaging, articulate and informative speaker on the topic of online education. He has more than 12 years of experience in higher education as a leader in the management, design and implementation of online degree programs; academic administration; admissions; and instructional design. Since joining Post University in 2004, he has grown the online program from fewer than 100 students to nearly 4,000 students. He also was instrumental in gaining accreditation for a new Online MBA Degree program, which was the first completely online MBA degree program offered in Connecticut, and a recipient of a Connecticut Quality Improvement Award Silver Innovation Prize. Recently, Mr. Mulgrew helped gain approval for a new Master of Education Online degree program that focuses on the future of education.

Mr. Mulgrew has held management and leadership positions at Drexel University in Philadelphia in both traditional campus-based and online programs, and has spoken at national conferences on the future of higher education, and online learning and design. He also has taught at Immaculata University, Drexel University, and Post University in subjects as diverse as political philosophy, logic, organizational behavior, creativity, and innovation. He is a graduate of both Indiana University of Pennsylvania and the University of Glasgow in Scotland.
